Patient of the Month

Jill Lange is the patient of the month because she has referred the most patients to our office.

Digestive Disorders

For most people, digestion is a natural process that we take for granted. However, there are millions of Americans who are not as fortunate. When the digestive process goes awry, it can result in any number of digestive disorders, all of which can interfere with every aspect of their lives. While the list of digestive is a vast and varied, some of the more common disorders include colic, acid reflux, constipation, irritable bowel syndrome and Crohn's disease. A common component of many of these can be described as a nervous system that is "out of sync." Every section of the GI tract is prone to its own unique disorder- some are merely annoying, such as heartburn, while others can be painful or even debilitating with cramping, bloating, diarrhea, constipation, or bleeding. Research and clinical evidence continues to suggest that a malfunctioning nervous system may be a key factor in the development of many digestive disorders. Much of the control of the digestive system is under the direct control of the brain stem. The brain stem is the command center for many vital functions, including digestion. Misalignment in the upper cervical spine (neck) can interfere with the function of the

Treatment: Fibromyalgia

When I first came in I was constantly in pain at the pain scale of 7-8. I couldn't focus mentally and had blurry vision. Balance and any amount of physical activity sent my muscles screaming. Recovery time took weeks for the simplest activities.

Now my shoulder has less pain and quicker recovery time and almost all of my fibromyalgia issues are gone. I feel like a new woman; more focused and energized than I have been in years.

Thank you Dr. Shiels and your awesome staff!!
